dedication...

Brother Norbert Kleinhenz:
As a principal of the school, he is the busiest man around; yet, he is always available for the students to talk to. A man full of good humor, a man full of understanding—he is our principal, Brother Norbert Kleinhenz.

Brother Joseph Scheible:
Just ask anyone who has been taught by him. They will all reply, "He was a nice teacher, who did more than just going over textbooks." He is more than just a simple teacher. Brother Scheible is a man from whom everyone can learn.

Brother Charles Imhoff:
He has dedicated himself to education, and to God. Sixty-nine years of his consecrated life have been led as a member of the Society of Mary. Twenty-two years have been devoted to the students. No words can praise him as high as he deserves.

Brother Germain Vonderscher:
... a Frenchman who built Chaminade Hall; a man who practically has all the stamps printed in Japan; a teacher who is friendly to everyone; a brother who for twenty-eight years has totally dedicated himself to the school. This is our Brother Germain.

Brother Charles Schermesser, S.M.
(1886-1973)

“He was a man of duty, a man full of love of God and his neighbor. He was a real saint.”

—Brother Germain Vonderscher

THE PRINCIPAL

SPEAKS OUT

To the Class of 1974:

The Commencement Exercises are but a formal culmination of an educative process that, for many of you, began twelve years ago at St. Joseph College. In reality, this is just the "beginning" of new ventures as you pursue goals and plans for the future.

During your tenure here at SJC, it was our primary task as educators to mold you into well-rounded and balanced men. The concerns of your teachers were first and foremost for your welfare. Besides academic and scholastic achievements, we were interested primarily in developing men of moral integrity and social responsibility. This will always be our primary objective of education at St. Joseph College.

Since I taught you as sophomores in 1972, it is quite apparent that you have matured in many ways. Your junior year was most important and vital in this process of formation. From all outward manifestations, you developed a spirit, pride, and class consciousness that has spurred you on to greater and significant achievements.

This year you found yourselves as leaders of the school—setting the pace for your fellow underclassmen. You have done a commendable job in most every area, of which you can be rightfully proud.

In years hence, as you peruse this FORWARD, let it always be a reminder of the great moments you experienced here and of the many international friendships which you cultivated. Never forget that you are truly "sons" of SJC—a relationship we hope never ceases. Remember that you have a moral obligation always to uphold the good name of the SJC family.

It is my honest prayer and sincere good wish that you achieve your life goals and ambitions to the fullest.

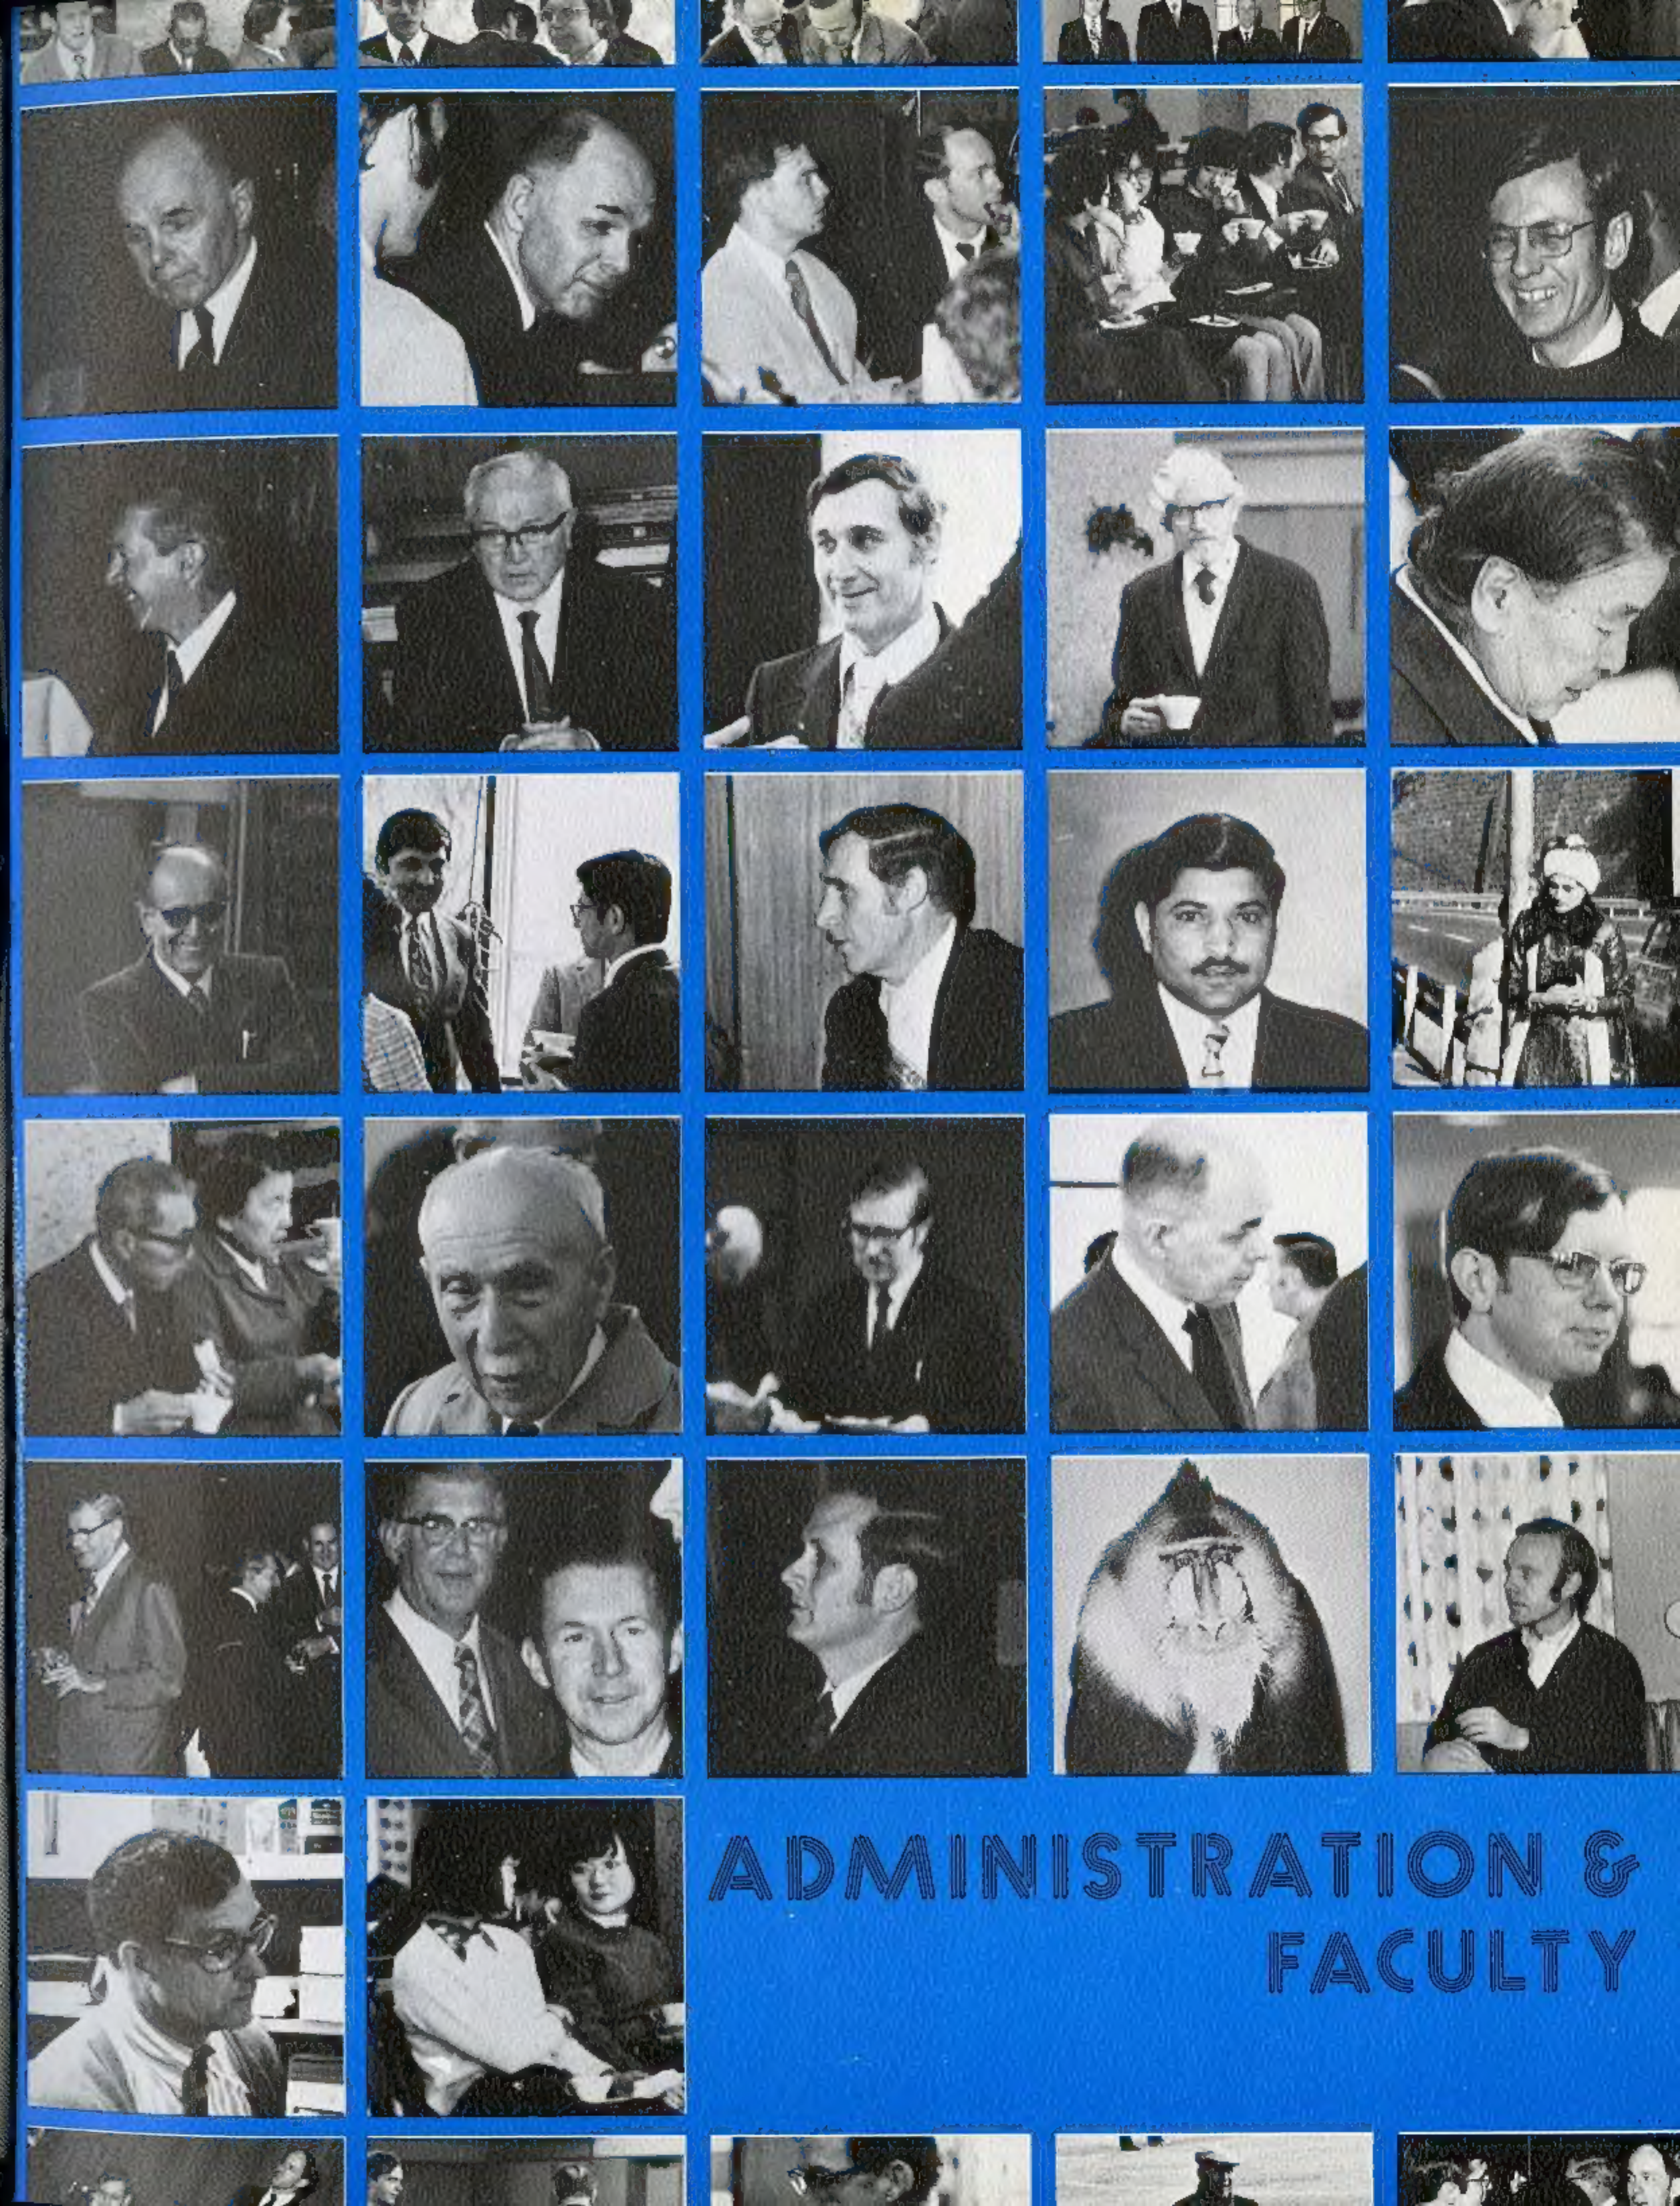

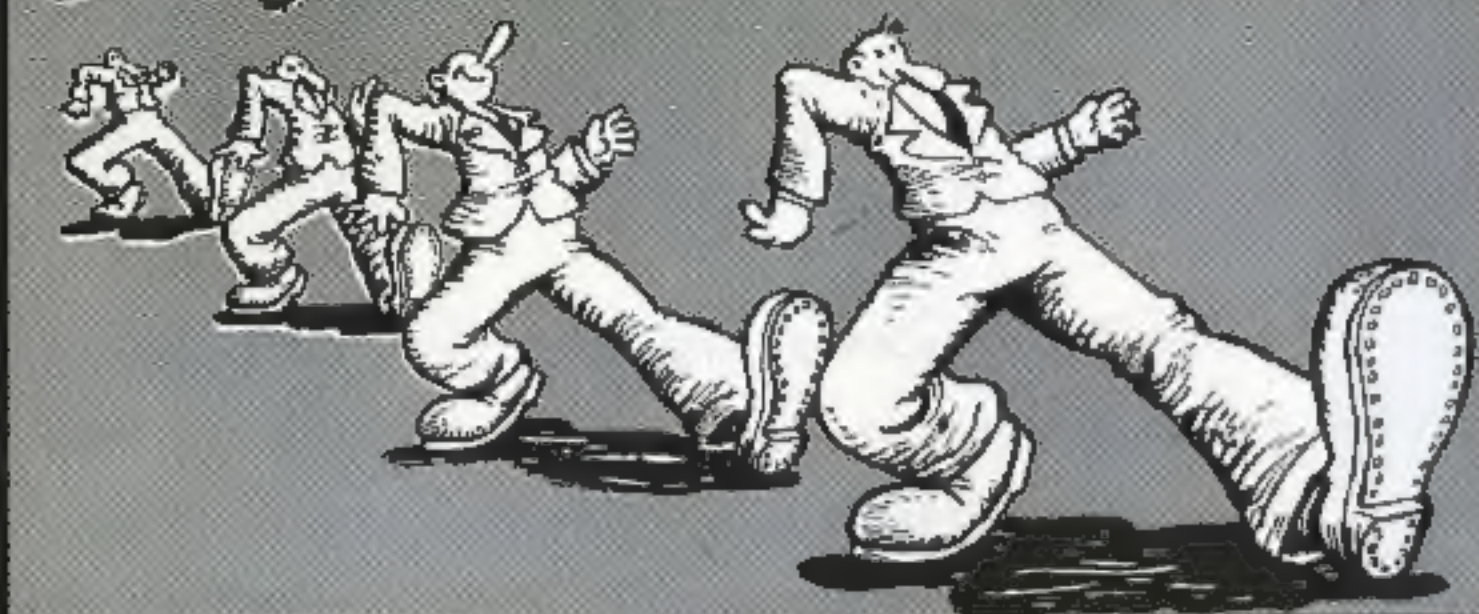

Most sincerely,

Brother Norbert Kleinhenz, S. M.

Let go of my tongue!

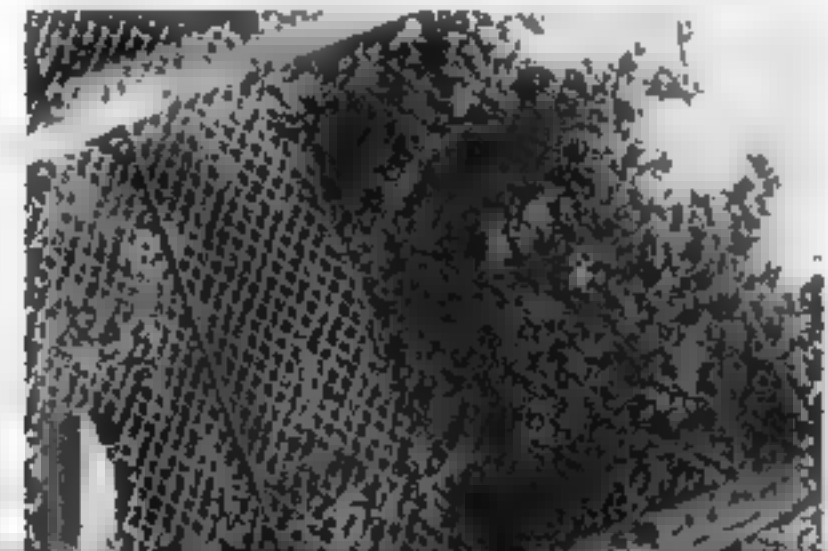

Pass! They're not laughing at our jokes!

"You mean Newton didn't like apples?"

Hey, I thought these were supposed to be the best years of our lives!

"What else do you guys do for kicks?"

"What's really?"

"You're probably wondering why I did this"

Look at this deal. I got for ya, kiddo!

"Will you guys come down and help us cross the street, please?"

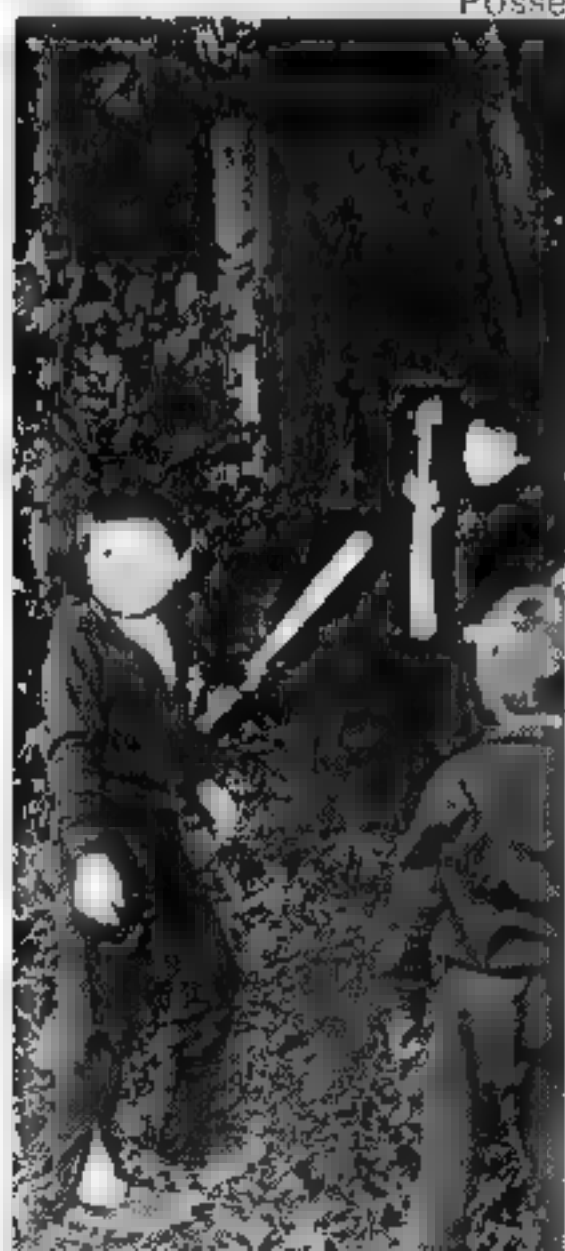

Sorry Kaio, there's no room for you

"Nuts! The beer ain't cold yet!"

"We'll pose nude for only ¥6,000"

Posse

"There must be an easier way to get out of school!"

"I found a bug!"

"When the warden ain't lookin' let's make a break for it!"

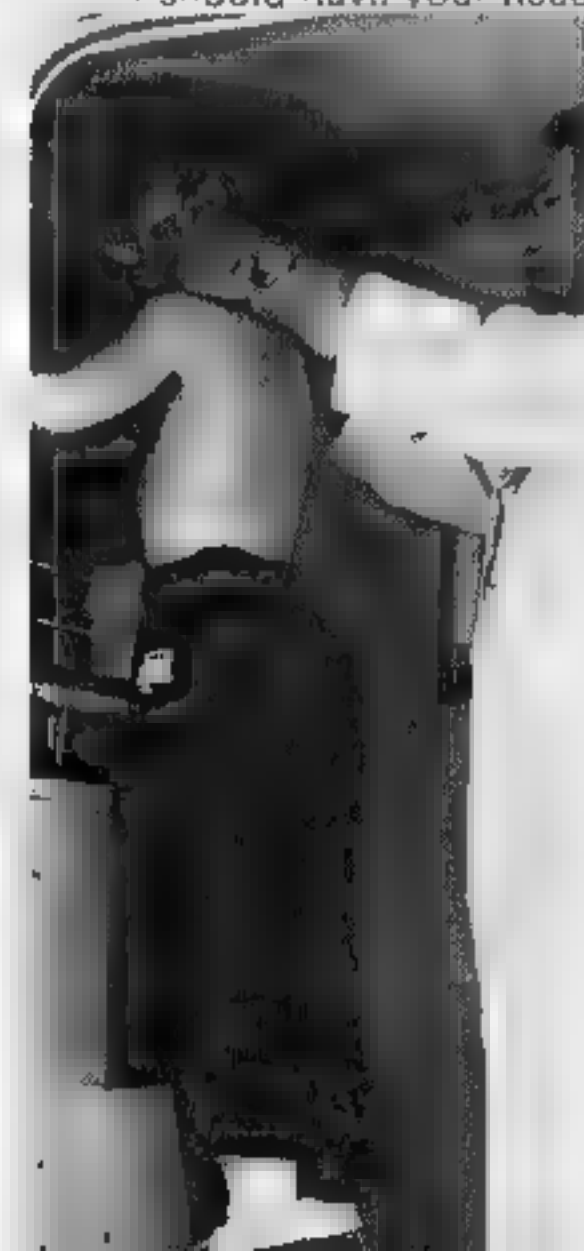

"You want me to jump?"

"That's my Steve McQueen pose"

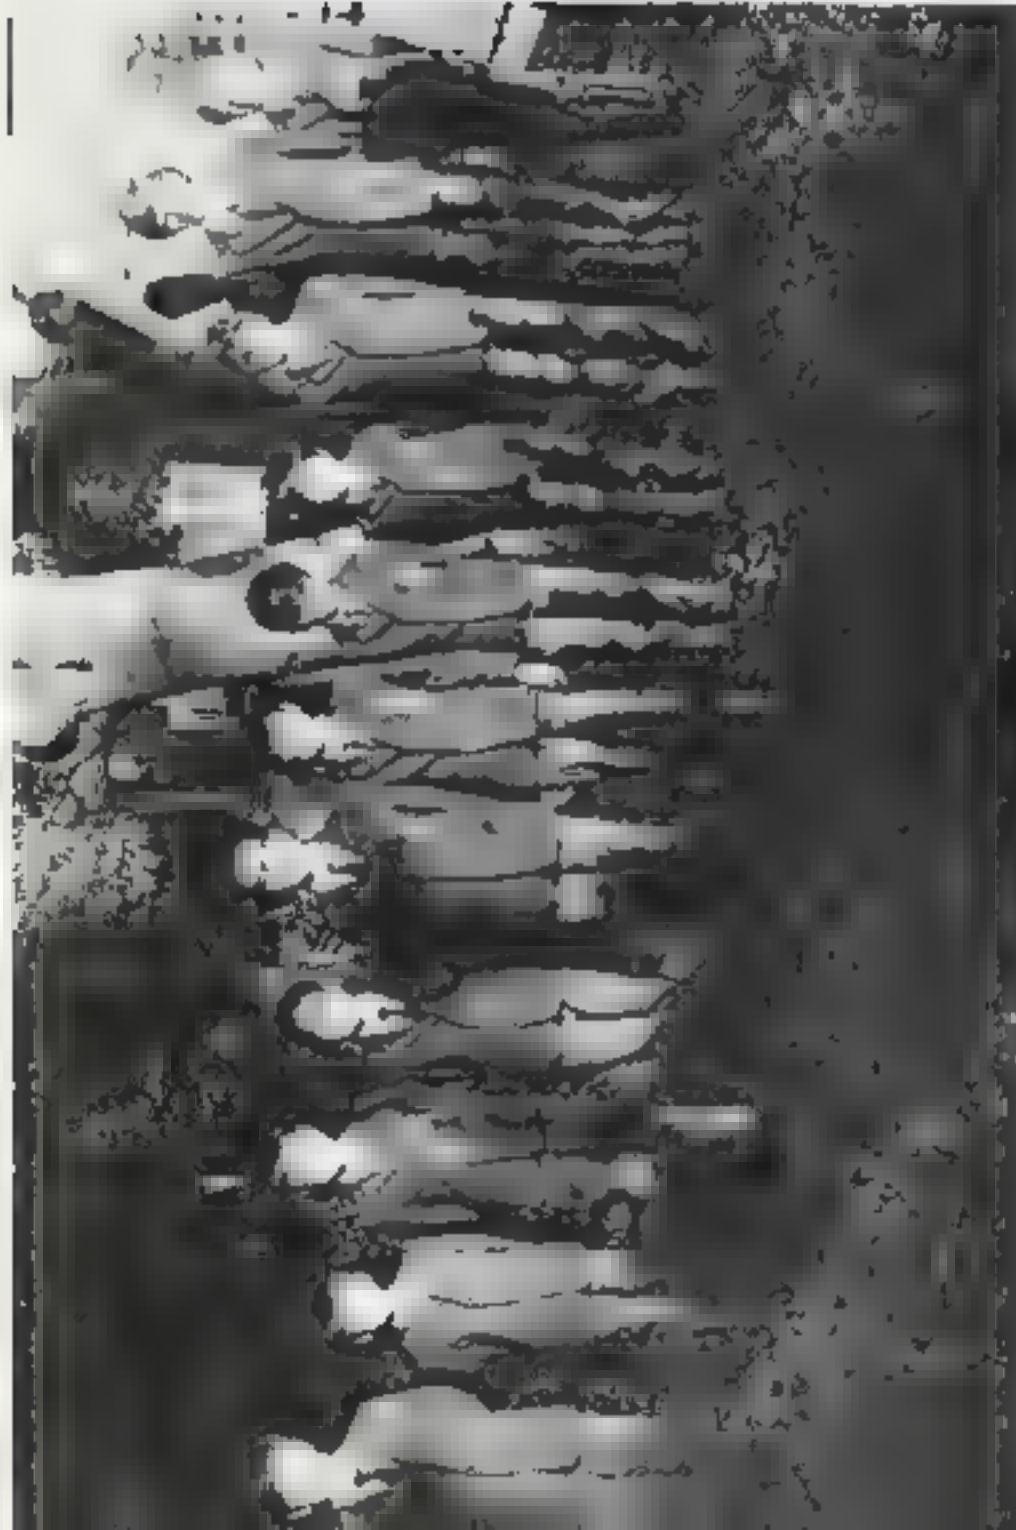

Portrait of a boy standing next to a wall

"I should have your head back on in a few minutes"

Keep on Truckin'...

... and now a word

from our sponsors...

FERN
Editor-in-chief

Fern is a guy who always kept things moving. Whenever the rest of us got lazy and our working pace slowed down, he gave the right push and results started pouring in. Besides organizing the book, recruiting the staff, and going to Byblos, he also did lots of the layout and devised most of the terrific ideas.

Even though Bunda had the title of Assistant Business Manager, he should really have been the Miscellaneous Editor for he worked on business matters, photography, layout, and other things. Because of his hard work, he sometimes missed his favorite cartoons on TV.

CHEN
Assistant Business Manager

GEORGE
Co-Editor

Bakamura, our co-editor, worked hard to amuse all of the FWD staff. He was always prepared to bear all the frustrations of others within his king-sized dimples. He is the chief figure for attack whenever the sadistic Mr. Din enters his immediate vicinity.

Milton was a creative ad layout editor, but his only disadvantage was that he could not go anywhere by himself. He always was in dire need of a faithful supporter, but when the going got rough, it was ol' Nokyo-san that got the ad department moving.

MILTON
Ad Editor

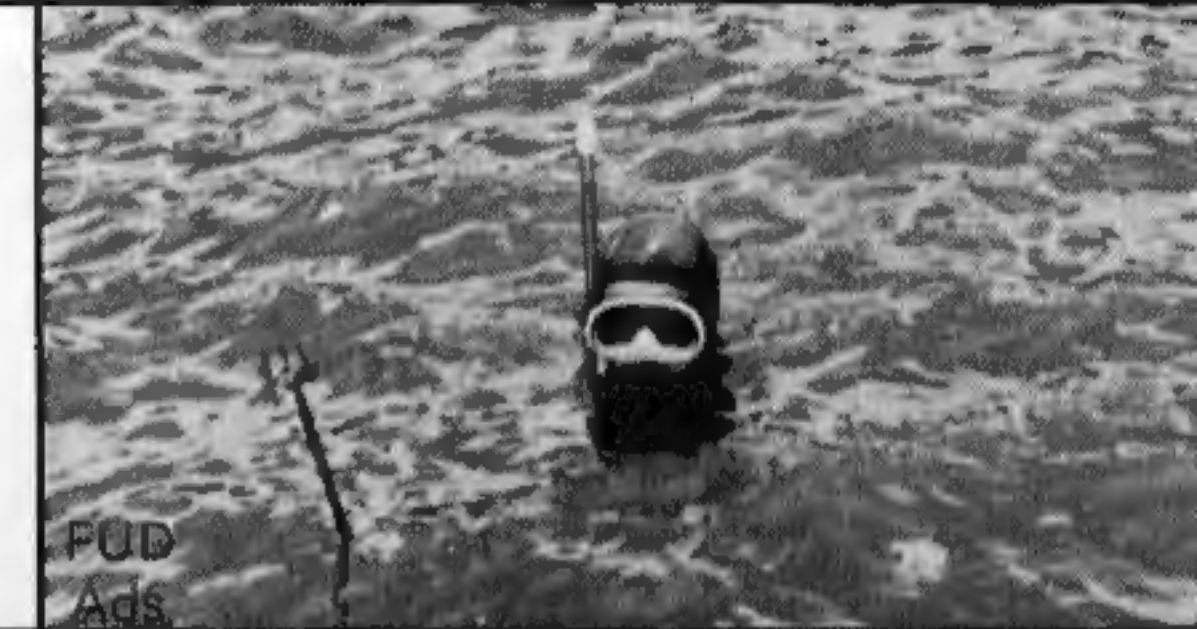

DON
Editor

Don, a native Californian who speaks fluent obscene Japanese, is what you might call the "d" in "Forward", for without him the book would be nothing. He went thru countless nites, working on layout, and you can see the magnificent results he came up with. We wonder how this heavy, chain-smoker was capable of working for such a long time without dying.

Gorilla-man Fud, was a loyal member of our staff. We can't recall how many pencils, rulers, and typewriters he has destroyed during the year. Here we see him designing ads in his favorite habitat.

FUD
Ads

GUNGA DIN
Pix

For a dude who hates photography, Mr. Din (our loyal picture man) has more talent than most people who live only for photography. Gunga Din is our official FWD '74 trouble shooter; never complains, and is always there and willing to climb up to the crazy places he had to go to get our pix. Eat your Nikon out, Andy Warhol!

Agota, who used his long, triangular chin as a stylus, helped us a lot in the advertising section. Kaz, Japan's National Treasurer, will be remembered as a unique guy who stored his brain in his chin.

KAZ
Ads

NAITOH
Literary Editor

Shin-shin, the literary bug-a-gunga editor, worked to type hundreds of papers filled with words and letters. Sometimes he was nervous, but if we examine his work now, we see that he did a great job. With his typewriter beside him (sometimes even in bed) he labored to complete his monstrous task.

As well as being a great sportsman, Kimura was a very efficient treasurer. He was always in perfect control of all the financial situations of the FWD. It is rumored he saved us from bankruptcy.

KIMURA
Treasurer

BRUCE KUAN
Business Manager

Sun, the richest guy on the staff, had dignity as the business manager. Even though he never showed at any of the meetings, he got his job done. The reason he never came had something to do with a certain Miss Janet.

This guy's not at all as bad as he seems to be, believe me. Every time we were up against a wall, we could always count on good ol' Mr. Hackett for solid sense and logical adult advice. He was an indispensable tool for our book.

MR. HACKETT
Moderator

CARLOS
Art Editor

Carlos, our South American art editor, came up with the funnier cartoons of this book. Lovingly nicknamed "onara", by his friends who know the truth, he was always there when we didn't need him and gone when we did.

staff

Well, I never thought I'd see the day, that after twelve long years of hard labor, I'd be released from the "penitentiary." And as I look back, I'm not as thrilled in leaving school as I had thought I would be—not at all as thrilled.

This final year of our over a decade-long trek has proven itself to be the most rewarding for all of us. We have learned many new things, in both academic and social fields. But I think I can say with confidence, that for the FORWARD staff, the making of this yearbook has been the apogee of all our learning experiences thus far. We got a taste of what real hard work means, what meeting deadlines requires of an individual, and just how heavy real responsibility is. But most important of all, in this educational process we learned how to get along with different kinds of personalities—moody ones, nervous ones, quiet ones, and unfriendly ones. I am sure that this experience will save us a lot of knifed guts!

Keep on Truckin'!

several sleepless nights, countless headaches, and a myriad of problems.
Cheer up! It's not that bad.
